Anne Frank: The Diary of A Young Girl is a world-famous book, which was based on a true story that happened to Anne and her family. Anne started keeping the diary when she was thirteen years old. Anne's parents, her only sister, she and four other Jews had hidden in a chamber inside her father's office in 1942 before they were reported to the authorities in 1944. The office was in Amsterdam, the Netherlands. After that, they were all caught by the Nazis and sent to the Nazi Concentration Death Camp. Finally, all of them died in World War II except Anne's father, Otto Frank. Because of serious health problems, Anne herself died in a Nazi Concentration Death Camp in German in April 1945, just before she could get her freedom back. In September 1945, the war finally came to the end.

After reading Anne's diary, Otto Frank was so shocked that he told his friend he hadn't understood his younger daughter enough. And the detailed daily lives kept in the diary made him think of the old memories. He got married again in eight years. At last, Otto had lung cancer and died when he was ninety-one years old.

An earthquake along with a tsunami hit Japan on March 11, 2011. The tsunami was over fifteen meters high and caused a lot of damage. Many people died. Some towns were almost knocked down. Besides, this earthquake and the tsunami caused the nuclear radiation accident in Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Plant. As soon as the accident happened, the habitants there were sent away right away to keep them safe from nuclear radiation, which may lead to sickness or even death.

At that time, the workers in the nuclear power plant had to do their part to fix the machines in order to avoid further damage to the people and the environment in Fukushima Daiichi. They exposed themselves to too much nuclear radiation, so some of them either got serious health problems or had cancer a few years later.

The habitants were sent to the shelters. Taiwanese people volunteered to raise money, donate clothes, prepare meals and make videos to show their love and care for Japan and these victims. No matter how terrible these natural disasters and man-made accidents are, we can always pay love forward to make the world better.
