  When someone says the word "pollution", most people think about pollution of the air, water and land. But there are other kinds of pollution, too. Noise pollution is unwanted or harmful noise, usually from anything man-made. There is also light pollution.

  Light pollution comes from the over use of artificial light at people's homes or city buildings. Light pollution wastes electricity and creates skyglow. Skyglow reduces our chances to see the sky, and blocks out the beautiful night sky and its stars. According to the 2016 "World Atlas of Artificial Night Sky Brightness," eighty percent of the people in the world lives under skyglow.

  In Taiwan, people are trying to protect some places from light pollution. In 2019, Hehuan Mountain(合歡山) was made Taiwan's first International Dark Sky Park. Nature lovers are working together to reduce light pollution. Hehuan Mountain Dark Sky Park is only the third park in Asia.
