ARM investigators entered into Jaipur, India to record the actual condition of elephant tourism abuse since elephant rides are offered as transportation and improper means to attract the tourists worldwide.

These working elephants have proved to be extremely profitable in India, which helps this country make a fortune. However, the elephants used for not only rides but amusement and ceremony are forced to work for years and are being abused. This is a violation of Indian animal protection laws. For example, they are forced to carry up to 900 visitors per day and often, multiple people on their back per ride. The death rate among the working elephants has been continuously increasing due to being over worked and wounded. Herders often beat them into submission. Besides, the working condition is poor, too. The elephants have to work under the extreme heat all day long.

Scars are easily seen on their legs because of the chains and sharp devices used to confine them. Most of the elephants are blind and are still expected to fulfill ride requests from tourists. You can support ARM by choosing not to take an elephant ride in India.
