Some choices are as easy as deciding which clothes to wear. Some choices, on the other hand, are more difficult to make and need careful thought. For example, many people feel lost when they are choosing a school or a career. That is why it is important to learn how to make a good decision.

Here are the steps you can follow to make a good decision. First, write down all the options. Listing them is a way to help you get a clear idea of what options you have. Second, look for information about the options. Knowing the options well helps you make a better decision. Third, think about the possible risks of each option. Try to ask yourself what might happen when you take different options. Finally, make your decision and believe in yourself.

To win the race, Cat and his best friend, Rat, were thinking about the best way to get ahead of the other animals. Finally, they planned to jump onto Ox's back because Ox was good at swimming. When the day of the race came, Cat and Rat were on Ox's back and successfully left the others behind. With the finish line in sight, Rat was so excited that he only cared about winning. He didn't care about his best friend and pushed Cat into the river suddenly. In the end, Rat won first place. Since then, Rat and Cat have not been friends any more. Maybe that's why cats are always running after rats to catch them.
