You are on a plane and ready to take your first bite of airplane food, but it doesn't taste as good as it does on land. So, why do food and drinks on airplanes taste different?

In fact, we tell flavors through our senses of smell and taste. Sadly, those two senses become less strong when we fly 30,000 feet above the Earth. The humidity level in the air is only 12%, and the air pressure is really low. As a result, our noses don't work so well. When our noses don't work well, our sense of taste doesn't, either. That is because 80% of our sense of taste comes from our sense of smell. Therefore, salty and sweet flavors go down by about 30%. Besides, the loud noise from the plane makes the problem even worse. Luckily, we can still taste bitter, sour, and spicy flavors.

Now, you know what changes the taste of food and drinks on airplanes. So, next time you are on a plane and taste something bad, the problem may not be with the cooks.

 Irene: Hi, Leon. I'm checking my friends' Instagram.
 Leon: Again? You really spend too much time on it.
 Irene: Maybe you're right. But I just can't help looking at everyone's Instagram. Most of the time, I check others' Instagram because they look happy but I am not. I want to know why.
 Leon: Have you ever heard of "social media depression"?
 Irene: No, what is that?
 Leon: Some studies say social media has something to do with depression. It's easy for social media users to compare themselves with their friends. However, whether they are better or worse than their friends, they always feel worse about themselves in the end.
 Irene: I agree. Every time I check my friends' Instagram, I feel sad. It seems that they have better lives than I do.
 Leon: Hey! You should read this study. It says, "Instagram, out of other social media, is most likely to make young people feel depressed."
 Irene: Really? Why is that?
 Leon: I don't know, but I do know one thing—Online communication is very different from face-to-face communication. What you see on social media is not always true.
